

Combining Clinical Excellence with a Strong Military Culture

Having received extensive rehabilitation services through the Veterans Administration medical system, Captain Hromisin has now returned to community living, but, like many veterans who have suffered a traumatic brain injury, he requires ongoing care, treatment and 24-hour support. Together with her husband Bill, Kristin Perilli conceptualized the Thomas Jerome House to honor her friend and other veterans who can benefit from a supportive, therapeutic community environment as they continue their brain injury recovery.

This year, Bancroft Brain Injury Rehabilitation is proud to partner with the Thomas Jerome House to develop this unique residential program for veterans with brain injuries. Our alliance combines clinical excellence with a strong emphasis on military culture. Together, we help veterans rebuild their lives.

An Inspired Alliance—The First of Its Kind

Bancroft and The Thomas Jerome House have forged a unique partnership designed to help veterans who have sustained a traumatic brain injury re-assimilate into community living as they continue their rehabilitation.

The Thomas Jerome House is a collaborative project between Bancroft Brain Injury Rehabilitation and the Thomas Jerome House in honor of Army Captain Thomas Jerome Hromisin, who in 2007 sustained a gunshot wound to the head by an Iraqi sniper while serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom. As a result of this event, Captain Hromisin sustained a severe traumatic brain injury and underwent a lengthy rehabilitation program. During the course of his hospitalization, he was reunited with a former college classmate, Kristin Perilli, an occupational therapist who specializes in working with wounded veterans.

A Decisive Victory

The Thomas Jerome House program is designed to bridge the gap between military and civilian life following brain injury. Our programs are able accommodate both long term and transitional needs, and respite services may be offered based on availability. From combat boots to sneakers, our fundamental goal is to achieve a decisive victory against brain injury.

Bancroft employs licensed professionals in neuropsychology, physical, occupational, and speech therapies. Our programs are licensed by the NJ Department of Human Services and accredited by the Commission on the Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF). Bancroft is committed to clinical excellence and measurable outcomes.
